

Table of Contents

Declaration and statement of copyright.....	vi
Acknowledgements.....	vii

1. Parameters, variation and null subjects

1.1. Parameters and Universal Grammar.....	1
1.1.1. Government and Binding Theory.....	1
1.1.2. The Minimalist Program.....	1
1.1.3. Parameters.....	4
1.1.3.1. Government and Binding Parameters.....	4
1.1.3.2. Parameters in Minimalism.....	6
1.1.3.3. A note on micro-parameters and macro-parameters.....	7
1.1.4. The Extended Projection Principle.....	8
1.1.4.1. Parameter or Universal?.....	11
1.2. Generative grammar and the theory of Null subjects.....	13
1.2.1. The Null Subject Parameter.....	13
1.2.2. Chomsky's (1982) Analysis of Empty Categories.....	16
1.2.3. Huang's (1984, 1989) proposal.....	17
1.2.4. Rizzi 1986.....	20
1.2.4.1. Licensing and Identification.....	21
1.2.4.2. Partial paradigms.....	22
1.3. Null subjects in the Minimalist Program.....	22
1.3.1. The Move to Minimalism.....	22
1.3.2. Barbosa (1995) and Alexiadou and Anagnostopoulou (1998).....	24
1.4. Overview of the thesis.....	28
1.4.1. Chapter 2: preverbal subjects in Romance.....	28
1.4.2. Chapter 3: word order and the EPP.....	28
1.4.3. Chapter 4: null referential subjects.....	29
1.4.4. Chapter 5: null expletives.....	29
1.4.5. Chapter 6: partial pro-drop.....	30

2. Preverbal subjects in Romance null subject languages

2.1. Introduction.....	31
2.2. Overview of the chapter.....	31
2.3. Background clarifications.....	32
2.3.1. Verb raising: Pollock 1989.....	32
2.3.1.2. Objections to the split IP.....	40
2.3.2. Clitic Left Dislocation (CLLD).....	43
2.3.2.1. A base-generated dependency?.....	45
2.3.3. Relevant properties of CLLD.....	47
2.3.3.1. Melodic pause.....	47

2.3.3.2. Failure to reconstruct .....	48
2.3.3.3. No non-referential CLLD .....	48
2.3.3.4. Recursivity.....	49
2.3.4. Summary .....	49
2.4. Evidence that preverbal subjects are CLLD .....	50
2.4.1. Adverb placement.....	51
2.4.1.1. The problem of Italian .....	51
2.4.1.2. Spanish, European Portuguese and English.....	54
2.4.2. Failure to reconstruct? .....	55
2.4.3. Indefinites: non-referential preverbal subjects.....	58
2.4.3.1. Definiteness effects in Romance .....	61
2.4.4. Trentino and Fiorentino .....	65
2.4.5. Bound variable subjects.....	67
2.4.6. Summary .....	72
2.5. Evidence that not all preverbal subjects are CLLD .....	72
2.5.1. Differences in number of tokens .....	73
2.5.2. Pragmatic differences .....	74
2.5.3. Quantificational preverbal subjects .....	76
2.5.3.1. Portuguese QPs.....	78
2.5.4. Weak pronouns.....	82
2.5.5. Subjects present for disambiguation .....	82
2.5.6. Islandhood.....	84
2.5.7. Recursivity.....	85
2.5.8. Acquisition .....	87
2.5.9. Lack of ad sensum agreement .....	88
2.5.10. The position of the null pronoun .....	89
2.6. Summary .....	93

3. Word order and the EPP

3.1. Introduction .....	95
3.1.1. Outline of the chapter .....	96
3.2. Inversion.....	98
3.2.1. Germanic inversion.....	98
3.2.2. Romance inversion.....	99
3.3. Information structure.....	100
3.3.1. Contrastive focus.....	103
3.4. Empirical survey .....	104
3.4.1. French.....	104
3.4.1.1. Stylistic inversion .....	104
3.4.1.2. Expletive associate inversion .....	108
3.4.1.3. Narrow subject focus .....	110
3.4.2. Italian .....	111
3.4.2.1. Wide focus.....	111
3.4.2.2. Narrow subject focus .....	115
3.4.3. Spanish.....	117
3.4.3.1. Wide focus.....	117

3.4.3.2. Narrow subject focus .....	122
3.4.4. European Portuguese .....	124
3.4.4.1. Wide focus .....	124
3.4.4.2. Narrow subject focus .....	127
3.4.5. Brazilian Portuguese .....	131
3.4.5.1. Wide focus .....	131
3.4.5.2. Narrow subject focus .....	131
3.4.6. Summary and generalisations .....	133
3.4.6.1. Generalisations .....	134
3.5. Analysis of wide focus orders .....	135
3.5.1. VSO order in Spanish .....	135
3.5.1.1. The position of the XP .....	135
3.5.1.2. Subject vs. Topic .....	137
3.5.1.3. V2? .....	138
3.5.1.4. A rose by any other name: expletives that are not expletives.....	140
3.5.1.5. The position of the subject in VSO .....	142
3.5.1.6. Against the Mapping Hypothesis .....	143
3.5.1.7. Recap .....	146
3.5.2. VS order .....	147
3.5.2.1. Locative inversion .....	147
3.5.2.2. Null expletives? .....	149
3.5.3. Recap .....	153
3.6. Wh-questions .....	153
3.6.1. Wh-phrases and the EPP .....	153
3.6.2. Nominative Case .....	154
3.6.3. Word order in wh-questions.....	156
3.6.4. Spanish.....	156
3.6.5. Italian .....	158
3.6.6. European Portuguese .....	162
3.6.7. French Stylistic Inversion .....	165
3.6.8. Recap .....	166
3.7. Remaining problems: Case in locative inversion.....	167
3.7.1. VS in BP .....	169
3.7.2. VS in EP and Italian .....	170
3.8. Analysis of Focus S orders .....	171
3.8.1. Properties of V(O)S orders .....	173
3.8.1.1. Subjects remain low .....	173
3.8.1.2. Objects c-command the subject .....	175
3.8.1.3. Subjects do not have all the properties of low subjects.....	177
3.8.2. Previous analyses .....	178
3.8.2.1. Zubizarreta 1998 .....	179
3.8.3. My proposal: a minimalist formulation of P-movement .....	182
3.8.3.1. Object raising and focus .....	183
3.8.3.2. The phonological component .....	184
3.8.3.3. VSO in European Portuguese .....	186
3.9. Conclusions .....	194

4. Null referential subjects

4.1. Introduction .....	195
4.1.1. Outline of the chapter .....	197
4.2. Deletion in the Minimalist Program .....	197
4.2.1. The phonological component .....	197
4.2.2. VP Ellipsis .....	198
4.2.3. Copy Deletion .....	198
4.3. Roberts 2004 .....	200
4.4. The nature of 'rich agreement' .....	201
4.4.1. Roberts (2004) .....	202
4.4.2. Rohrbacher (1994, 1999) .....	203
4.4.3. Müller (2005) .....	206
4.4.4. The interaction with V2 .....	210
4.4.5. Summary .....	214
4.5. Potential problems .....	215
4.5.1. Acquisition Issues .....	215
4.5.2. Radical Pro-Drop .....	217
4.6. My proposal .....	220
4.6.1. Deletion or late insertion? .....	220
4.6.2. Nominative Case .....	223
4.6.3. Implementation .....	223
4.6.3.1. A spec-head operation? .....	226
4.7. The failure of deletion .....	226
4.7.1. Switch-reference .....	228
4.7.2. Foci .....	229
4.7.3. The Overt Pronoun Constraint .....	230
4.7.4. Ambiguous verb forms .....	232
4.8. Conclusions .....	233

5. Null expletives/locatives

5.1. Introduction .....	234
5.1.1. Outline of the chapter .....	236
5.2. The problem with null expletives .....	236
5.3. Types of null expletives .....	239
5.3.1. Quasi-referentials .....	241
5.3.2. Raising .....	243
5.3.3. Existentials .....	245
5.3.4. Extraposition .....	246
5.3.5. Summary .....	247
5.4. Interaction with V2 .....	248
5.4.1. The Mainland Scandinavian Languages .....	248
5.4.2. German and Icelandic .....	249
5.4.3. Dutch and Afrikaans .....	252

5.5. Typological predictions .....	253
5.6. Overt expletives in Romance NSLs .....	254
5.7. Conclusions .....	255
6. Partial pro-drop
6.1. Introduction .....	256
6.1.1. Outline of the chapter .....	257
6.2. The data .....	258
6.2.1. The pronominal paradigm in Brazilian Portuguese.....	258
6.2.2. Lack of deictic null subjects .....	259
6.2.3. Other null subjects in Brazilian Portuguese .....	260
6.2.4. Root null subjects .....	262
6.2.5. Null expletives and quasi-referentials.....	267
6.3. Null embedded subjects .....	268
6.3.1. Null subjects as $\Phi$ Ps .....	269
6.3.2. Movement.....	271
6.3.2.1. The semantics of null subjects in Brazilian Portuguese .....	273
6.3.2.2. C-command .....	274
6.3.2.3. Intervention.....	275
6.3.2.4. Subject orientation.....	277
6.3.2.5. Island facts.....	279
6.3.3. Parasitic gaps .....	284
6.3.3.1. Parasitic gaps in Brazilian Portuguese .....	285
6.3.3.1.1. Wh-movement and binding.....	289
6.3.4. Theoretical assessment .....	290
6.3.4.1. Movement.....	290
6.3.4.1.1. Phase impenetrability .....	290
6.3.4.1.2. Improper movement .....	291
6.3.4.1.3. Nominative Case .....	292
6.3.4.2. A-bar binding.....	296
6.3.5. Remaining problems.....	297
6.3.5.1. Montalbetti's effects .....	298
6.3.5.2. Optionality .....	299
6.4. Conclusions .....	301
7. Conclusions
7.1. The status of agreement in the Romance null subject languages.....	302
7.2. The EPP and free inversion.....	302
7.3. Case .....	303
7.4. Null referential subjects.....	303
7.5. Null expletives.....	304
7.6. Partial pro-drop in Romance .....	304
7.7. Final conclusions and future research.....	304